

Mamie Eisenhower, 1953-1961 (Camp David Diaries, Volume III)

This is Volume III of the Camp David Diaries eleven-volume series, a tantalizing approach to historical fiction combining women, politics, intimacies and the keeping of secret diaries at Camp David. Volume III Mamie Eisenhower (1953-1961), offers a peak into Mamie Eisenhower's life in the White House. The era is known as the Fabulous Fifties. We have the Golden Age of Television, the Edsel, ducktail haircuts, poodle skirts, the Salk vaccine and the Hula Hoop. Volume III contains comments by each succeeding First Lady (Jackie, Lady Bird, Pat, Betty, Rosalynn, Nancy, Barbara and Hillary), who also have diaries of their own (Volumes IV - XI). Over the years the women have created a First Ladies primer in which they share lessons learned, and give tips on how to handle their job, the press, the public, the White House staff, their children and, most of all, their husbands. The sheer voyeuristic nature of diaries is appealing, but when they are about the last eleven First Ladies, they are even more intriguing. This is history with an attitude.
