Not illustrated. 1919 Excerpt: ...commission and university officers find the field of service so wide and the possibilities so great that there is room for both agencies to cooperate in the same line of work. Traveling libraries.--The most characteristic activity of the library commissions, which at the same time is undertaken by some universities, is the circulation of traveling libraries of books. These traveling libraries are small collections of bound volumes, averaging about 25, for miscellaneous reading. The make-up of the collection is much the same, on a small scale, as that of local public libraries. Their object is to supplement the latter where it is small and to supply a substitute when it is absent. The loan collections are sent both to individuals and to community organizations. Several university extension divisions lend traveling libraries. Oklahoma had over 100 in circulation in 1919. The Wyoming extension service circulates traveling libraries consisting of 20 or more books of fiction, history, science, and travel. Legislative reference.--Some of the State libraries conduct legislative reference bureaus. When the university in the same State also has a reference bureau, the field is usually divided, so that the library serves especially the State departments and legislators and the university serves primarily the municipal authorities and local community organizations. Special service.--Most library commissions attempt to provide special collections of books for womens clubs. The clubs submit their yearly program and ask for certain books on the subjects listed. The books are procured and lent, sometimes for the year, upon payment by the club of a small fee and transportation charges. Frequently
